

Welcome to Settlers Village

Wagga Wagga

New apartment, same friends

RAY Pascall had been living in his villa at Settlers Village since 2003 - and he loved it. The long retired PMG telegraphist and World War II Digger may have been living on his own, but company was always close by and residents regularly dropped by with electrical items he could repair in the workshop he set up in his garage.

He was even able to host his daughter Beverly's dog Maddie for short visits. However, a few months before his recent 90th birthday, Ray's health took a turn for the worst.

He was laid low by pneumonia and fluid around his heart and lungs saw Ray admitted to intensive care.

By the time he was up and about again, living in his own in the villa was out of the question, but Settlers' serviced apartments weren't far away, and Ray loves his new accommodation.

"The doctors wanted to put me in a nursing home, but here I am still among my friends and I get 24 hour care," Ray said. "The greatest thing is the support I get from staff - there are three good meals a day and the room is cleaned and washing done once a week.

"And help is only a push of a button away".
