

MEDIA RELEASE – James Harker-Mortlock – Independent for Hume – Monday 4th March 2013

ATTENDING GOULBURN SHOW – THIS WEEKEND – 9TH AND 10TH MARCH 2013

James Harker-Mortlock, independent candidate for the seat of Hume, made the following statement this morning :

“I am looking forward to meeting locals to discuss issues of importance to them when I attend the up and coming Goulburn Show this weekend. I will be manning a stand in the pavilion at the show.

The Goulburn Show, which commenced its long tradition in 1846 at the Old Brewery, forms an integral part of Goulburn’s 150th Anniversary celebrations this month.

As I travel around the electorate of Hume, doing street walks and attending local shows, it is becoming very clear to me that despite the apparent desire of most voters to change the federal government, they also want a change in the way the people of Hume have been treated by federal governments of all persuasions. Voters in Hume are tired of being sidelined by both major parties because Hume is regarded as a safe seat. Voters in Hume know that neither of the major parties have policies for Hume. Voters in Hume want things fixed in Hume which have been ignored for too long by successive federal governments. Voters in Hume understand that a conservative independent with a long history of involvement in the mechanics of politics and who is focussed on the needs of the electorate would be their best chance for bringing about the changes they want.

I look forward to meeting as many people as possible from Goulburn and the surrounding district to listen to their views. I wish the Goulburn AP & H Society all the best for a very successful weekend!”
