Press release: Same Sex Marriage and the Environment

Barry O'Farrell's recent support for same sex marriage in the wake of New Zealand's legislation would have some interesting consequences. Beside the immediate response from Fred Nile to withdraw of support for the NSW Government, there is also the challenge to Tony Abbot as leader of the Opposition Coalition. The challenge over the issue of a conscience vote over so called marriage equality may even result in a change of leader for the Liberals.

Perhaps one thing Barry O'Farrell has not considered, he has played into the hand of the Greens. One of the Green's principles is Sustainable Development. Sustainable Development is a euphemism for halting economic and population growth as part of the green religion of the environment. Sustainable Development is an answer to the so called man made global warming come climate change problem. The Greens are renowned for their policies on abortion and euthanasia not just for freedom of choice but unwittingly a means of controlling population numbers. Clearly Barry O'Farrell has not realised that same sex marriage works towards the same end as a most inefficient method of generating population growth. I am sure the Greens are salivating at the support, that Barry has given to the Green's agenda, facilitating their ideology, giving them oxygen to breathe and grow their influence.

Given a conscience vote in the Liberal Party few politicians will stand in the way of same sex marriage. However there still remains one political party in New South Wales, which will always without equivocation oppose same sex marriage, the Christian Democratic Party. The Christian world view of the environment will always stand in opposition to the Greens. The Greens would have you live in a cave with reversals in economic and population growth. The Christian worldview of the environment is one that was once given to all mankind; be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth and subdue it.¹
