Lifelong learning journeys start here

LUTHERAN Primary School Wagga Wagga welcomes enrolment enquiries.

The co-educational Kindergarten to Year 6 school offers a 21st century approach to learning, valuing the ability of each child, yet with a current enrolment of 380 students it is not at capacity.

"As Principal I believe we have an obligation to add value to the educational experience of children who attend to ensure that every child is taken as far as possible – it doesn't matter the start point," Lutheran Primary School Principal, Dr Ken Albinger, explained.

"We support inquiry-based learning that values the ability of each child."

An advocate – and shining example – of lifelong learning, obtaining his EdD in 2005, Dr Albinger regards learning as a journey and a partnership between children, their parents and teachers.

"We are looking at where students need to be – learning is a journey and a constant exploration – a good school helps children to do that."

"We emphasise the acquisition of skills and concepts in all key learning areas to prepare for productive and satisfying lifelong learning."

"At Lutheran Primary School everyone is very clear on our framework of beliefs and understandings – common goals and purposes that we operate within and which provide opportunities to grow a collaborative community of learning."

About Lutheran Primary School

LUTHERAN Primary School's Mission is to provide a caring, Christian environment in which the congregation, teachers, parents and students actively collaborate to ensure every child is provided with the resources and opportunities to reach their potential in spiritual, intellectual, physical, cultural, social and emotional areas of their lives.

In keeping with its Mission, Lutheran Primary School follows a curriculum set by the NSW Board of Studies, as well as teaching Christian Studies, with a specialist physical education teacher providing a well-structured physical education program and perceptual-motor program.

With bright, well-equipped learning spaces right across the school and a twenty-year building program recently completed within 14 months, Lutheran Primary School offers students excellent facilities and resources.

Specialist teachers in English and German as well as learning support staff cater for children of every ability, while parents are also able to arrange for their children to have private speech and drama coaching, or music lessons through the Riverina Conservatorium of Music during school hours.
